Doing a PhD abroad is a very painful career especially for people like me who is a son, husband and father. I have had oxymoron experiences in due time. My mam passed away on February 19, 2017 where I was not able to attend her funeral even. I was entertaining queries from my daughter and son starting from the second month of my departure, ‘when are you coming?’. I was all the time worried about the economic status of my family and the educational mentorship of my kids which stressed me beyond the academic and management hassles of the PhD work. Despite all these, the PhD has come to its climax due to the concerted efforts of different individuals, offices, institutions and organizations where the researcher is obligated to acknowledge at least the most prominent ones; without whom the outcome would have been else.

The first and foremost acknowledgeable institutes are the Indian Council for Cultural Relations (ICCR) and Tezpur University who re-germinated the interest of pursuing a PhD and reopened the already ready chapter to be closed. Thank you for the faith you had in considering me as a PhD candidate at this very late hour and made my zeal real. Especially, the management of Tezpur University was awesome in managing the challenges systematically and positively. Thank you very much indeed.

My supervisors, Dr. Nil Ratan Roy and Prof. Swarnalata Das were not only the usual types of academic supervisors that you get academic supports in your research endeavours but they were also guides for administrative and other non-academic issues as well. Thank you for accommodating all my academic and non-academic queries.

It is also my keen interest to acknowledge the contribution of Dr. Anjali Sharma (former -supervisor) in due process of my PhD work.

I am grateful to my beloved children, Safe and Robel who were inspiring and motivating me to go ahead. God Bless You All. My wife, Mulunesh Negash merits high respect who was shouldering all the hurdles in managing the family alone. Thank you so much mam!

My sisters and brothers, S/r Wuditu, Enanu, Melkam, S/r Belaynesh, Tsegaye and Dr. Eshetu, Wondwossen and Tsigereda were extremely bothering about my family and myself. You all treated me both as your brother and eldest son. May God Bless You Abundantly!

I was providential to be surrounded by people who are benevolent, honest, open and reliable. More specifically, this may go to Prof. Prasanta Kr. Das, Director of the International Office of Tezpur University and Dean of Humanities and Social Sciences. Your kind advice and concern stirred me to commit myself in pursuing the program. Whenever I have a concern, you were there in a heartbeat. Thank you very much sir, I will not forget your worth deeds. Dr. Yeasmin Sultana, Dr. Sashapra Chakrawarty, Dr. Pratima Pallai and other faculty and staff deserve high regard. Thank you very much for welcoming and taking care of me where you made my stay in the university more convenient and friendly.

Particularly, I am grateful to recognize the moral and financial supports of my buddies, Mr. Sisay Tilahun and Mr. Moges G/Mariam whom I have been enjoying their earnest, friendly care and supports. I am thankful to your immense help in the provision of moral and financial supports for my family to fill all those gaps observed due to my absence. I am adoring your brotherhood. Long live to our esprit de corps.

I am greatly indebted to acknowledge the supports and collaborations I received from the four District Education Offices, Finance and Economy Development Offices of (Abeshege, Fogera, Libo Kemkem and Walkete) and 16 schools where I collected the data. The findings of this research are extracted from their real experiences, reflection and lessons where the researcher synthesized, organized and interpreted to give them coherence and general picture. I also extend my appreciation to school principals, teachers, students and parents who welcomed me with TRUST on a critical time of my fieldwork where some of my data collection sites were in turmoil.

My deepest cheers go to Ambachew Negash, Ambachew Bitew, Daniel, Selamnew, Worku Adane, teacher Tesfaw Mekonnen, Mamo Tsegaye and others who were ushering me in the field work as some of the research districts and schools were totally new for me.

I am thankful to prof. Megan Tschannen-Moran where she gave me her permission to use both the Faculty Trust Omnibus T-Scale, and Principal Trust Scale. I also extend my thanks to Rev. Paul Pudussery (PhD.) who generously shared me more than 150 e-books, journals, and articles that gave me a footstep for my PhD. work.

Remarkable recognitions go to experts who assisted me in the translation and validation of the tools. These may address, Mr. Moges G/Mariam, Dr. Gedefaw Kassie, Mr. Tilahun Gessese, Mr. Adane Abeje, Mr. Dereje Bezabeh, Mrs. Senait Bitew, Dr. Lemessa Bayissa, teacher Temesgen Degu and others whose name is not listed here. Thank you very much for your technical supports.

My hostel mates worth gratitude for accompanying, socialising, teaching and involving me in cultural events, annual meet, Holi (Festival of Colours), etc. Thank you very much for making me a member of Saraighat C. V. Raman Men's Hostel (SCVVMH, 1001).
