ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

ॐ गं गणपतए नमो नमः

“Om, salutations to Lord Ganesha, the remover of obstacles”

No research work can be done in solitude. There are dozens of people who directly or indirectly contribute to the successful completion of a research project. It is also not possible, even though they are always remembered, to mention the names of each and every individual who may have contributed some way or the other to the successful completion of a study. I take this opportunity to acknowledge my gratitude to a select few among these dozens of contributors.

I would take this opportunity to thank my supervisor, Dr. Sarat Kumar Doley Sir throughout this journey of research. He drew the analogy of research and a forest, “Research is a kind of jungle (forest). You have to clear the forest and go ahead to explore new ventures.” After the start of the PhD works, it was immensely important that the clear direction regarding the research design and process involved in the project was understood. Dr. Doley Sir made me understand all the necessary steps in the process of research at different stages of the study. I pay my sincere gratitude to my supervisor for providing such help and assistance. We are emotional beings and hence we tend to go through breakdowns during this phase, especially when we deal with human subjects. I have been very lucky to have a supervisor, Dr. Doley Sir who never let me down and kept my energy high. He said, “Always keep this in mind- you are not doing a missionary work, you are doing research. You just need to explore the empirical truths and contribute something meaningful to the society.” Not only that, his words of motivation gave me fine picture of getting a decent job, living a purposeful life, and contributing something to the society.

I pay my gratitude to my parents who have been always with me through thick and thin. They have been my constant companion with whom I share about my work experiences in research. Thank you is not just enough. I don’t know in what way I would pay my gratitude in this lifetime. I offer my sincere gratitude to my father who took me to the university every day during the pandemic and never failed to drop me on time. My mother always motivated me to complete my assigned works on time.

I am very thankful to my brother, Kandarpa Kakoti (Sanu) for his contribution too in my journey of research. Sanu, being a practical, very wise, and straightforward person taught me to imbibe those qualities and enquired about the progress of my research work.

I would like to pay my gratitude to my kind neighbours and my parents' colleagues too for their constant encouragement and blessings. My relatives have been also a support system by wishing the best for me and so, I pay my gratitude to them as well. I would also like to pay my sincere gratitude to my teachers since my school days, upto my graduation, post-graduation, and B.Ed journey whose blessings have made everything possible to stand at this place. There have been many friends who taught me discipline, perseverance, and completing tasks before deadline, and I express my heartfelt gratitude to them.

I must also thank the faculty members along with the Head of the Department of English at Tezpur University as well as my Doctoral Committee members for giving me feedback about my research plan and the field work task undertaken at a difficult time. With further consultation with my supervisor, I could incorporate the suggestions and changes necessary to improve my dissertation. I have been fortunate to be instructed by a group of dedicated faculty members ever ready to help the students. I think that the theoretical appropriation of the analysis would have remained half cooked without the guidance and feedback constantly provided by the faculty members of the department. I pay my sincere gratitude to Mrs. Angel Habamon Syiem for helping me immensely in preparing the teaching learning materials during the third round of my experimentation.

I should also take this opportunity to thank all the participant learners of the different Departments in the School of Sciences of Tezpur University. The research would have remained a distant dream without their active participation and eagerness to answer the questions asked during the interviews. Of course, I was fortunate to know them personally in some cases. But majority of them were strangers. The level of benevolence of these students was such that they did not hesitate to express what they truly felt and thought. I would definitely like to work with them in the future once again.

Mention must be made about the contribution of my research colleagues during the study. They have been immensely helpful in informing me about the different schedules and deadlines related to the research project. They kept me motivated in different ways and I do not think I will be able to forget their contribution to the study. I would like to thank the four assessors from the core of my heart for assessing the data in time without fail and helping me generously throughout the study. I also thank the Department of Science and Technology, Government of India, for their funding in the study.

This journey of research is possible because of the divine blessings of the Almighty who cleared my ways and showed me opportunities in this path. I am grateful for whatever God has given me till date, and hence I pay my sincere gratitude to God.

I offer my gratitude to Koka, Aita, my ancestors and all the people who have helped me, motivated me, and inspired me in some way or the other, whose names have not been mentioned in this page.

At a personal level, I dedicate my thesis to my parents and my brother with pride!
Thank you everyone!

Sujata Kakoti
