ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First and foremost, I would like to express my sincere gratitude to my supervisor, Prof. Bijay K. Danta for his unwavering support, patience, and guidance at every stage since the very inception of this thesis. I am grateful to Prof. Farheena Danta for her valuable inputs and words of motivation. I thank my Doctoral Committee members, Dr. Debashish Mohapatra, Associate Professor and Dr. Sarat K. Doley, Associate Professor, Department of English, Tezpur University. My sincere appreciation goes to the Department of English, Tezpur University for always maintaining a welcoming and supportive space. I am thankful to the Central Library, Tezpur University for its services. I acknowledge the institutional fellowship provided by Tezpur University. I am thankful to my research group including Ajitabh, Priyanka, and Raktima for offering assistance whenever sought. I appreciate other members of the department for contributing in the ways they could.

My gratitude to the network of kindness and encouragement that surrounds me: Kaveri, for usually being my voice of reason; Seema, for never letting me lose hope; Bonjyotshna, for always enhancing my personal and academic efforts; Sushmita, for her endearing companionship; Priyanka Saha, for always lifting up my spirits, offering suggestions and helping me improve my writing; Prerana, for her literary insights, effortless conversations and heartfelt concern; Samita, for her comforting presence; and, Reecha, for regularly checking in on me.

I am filled with gratitude for Deniel and Rima for adding the element of fun and food to this serious business. I am indebted to Kaustav and Amrita for always keeping their doors open for me. My heartfelt thanks go to Mr. and Mrs. Barman for their generosity and hospitality, especially in the final hours of my writing.

I am forever grateful to my hostel-mates Joyee, Jayati, Pinky, and Puja for the sisterhood that has helped me evolve in academic and personal capacities. I thank Garima, Kakalee, Parag, Kaustov, and Hiya for their presence and scholastic help.

I am forever indebted to Maa, Papa, Ru, and Mousam da for their unconditional love and support, always going beyond their limits. Thank you Rajdeep for being my source of strength and inspiration.

Finally, I extend my heartfelt thanks to everyone who has played their part for this journey to reach its destination.
